Join businesses, manufacturers, local governments, educators, the construction trades and others for the Energizing Our Region monthly breakfast seminars, held on the first Friday of each month.

Energizing Our Region seminars focus on renewable technology and energy efficient practices and products.

Join your peers to network and gain knowledge about the economic and policy drivers of the new energy marketplace.

Driving down the energy use of a hospital or university holds lessons for everyone. Because they operate as little cities, their energy management challenges are similar to those faced by municipalities, municipal authorities, manufacturers, housing complexes, and commercial businesses—all rolled into one.

Join Al Neuner, Vice President of Facilities Operations of Geisinger System Services, and Chris Bailey, Director of Facilities Management at Susquehanna University to learn how investments in efficient and renewable energy technologies have significantly reduced facility operating costs.

Al Neuner, will discuss the investment decision making process, energy reduction results and cost savings achieved by Geisinger Health Systems, including investments in thermal storage, variable speed drives, cogeneration resulting in electricity load shedding and heat control, and water conservation.

Chris Bailey will describe the economic and environmental value of Susquehanna University's investment in green buildings, geothermal heating, lighting and sensors, and the central power plant's fuel diversification.
